

Ms. Luna's freshman Algebra I class collected data by counting beans and then counting the changes as parameters were changed. They then added this data to tables in their calculator to create a representative equation. Students were very confident and resourceful in their task and used technology as a tool to help them achieve answers. They were able to problem solve and became effective communicators with their results.

